Sweet Will

Being in

I begin with some description(s) of the experience of 'being ill', emphasizing... its physical/biological character its unconscious its dealing with the body a personal, individually experienced 'global'

2. Use some striking data from health statistics to indicate that illness and death are variable for different individuals within the same social class & even within the same family. The distribution of these changes in infant mortality and the death rate for some illness in different parts of country. Role of illness by social class. occupationally related illness

The experience of illness -

3. The 'patterning' of health, illness & death by 'social factors' impact of social structure on the 'life chances' of the individual. Individual located in social institutions/relations / structures which effect... 'social position' 'life chances' Social factors operate in + change life time & space.

More broadly: social science explores individual in terms of the influence/ relation to / impact of wider social factors & patterns which are not attributable to individual causes
